COURSE DESCRIPTION:

This on-line course traces the history of the labor movement in the U.S. from the mass strike movement of 1877 (the “Great Upheaval”) to the current attack on worker standards and collective bargaining rights. Course themes include the sources and forms of labor-capital conflict; the impact of the civil rights and women’s movements on the workplace and society-at-large; changes in technology, production, and workplace organization in an evolving capitalist economy; the rise and fall of private sector, industrial unionism; the growth of public sector unionism in the 1960s and the current efforts to weaken public employee unions; and the future of worker rights and labor movements in the United States.

Although not the exclusive focus of the course, we will closely study how labor unions have responded to changes in our economy, political system, and culture. Who labor unions represent, what they seek to accomplish in the short- and long-term, and how they attempt to reach their goals has evolved, even though the basic rationale for union organization – to defend and advance the interests of working people vis-à-vis powerful employers - has remained the same. In this course, we will look at how unions’ ability to improve their members’ living standards and working conditions has widely fluctuated. At times, unions have been quite weak, almost marginal in their influence. However, during other periods, unions have had a central role in shaping the economic and political systems in the U.S.

LEARNING OBJECTIVES:

The following learning objectives of the course are based on Rutgers University’s “Permanent Core Curriculum Learning Outcome Goals” (May 2008) and relate to the overall objective of a liberal arts education. "A Rutgers SAS graduate will be able to:"

H: Understand the basis and development of human and societal endeavors across time and place.
K: Explain the development of some aspect of a society or culture over time
L: Employ historical reasoning to study human endeavors
M: Understand different theories of human culture, social identity, economic entities, political systems, and other forms of social organization.

In the writing and communication area of the core:

S1: Communicate complex ideas effectively, in standard written English, to a general audience.
S2: Provide and respond effectively to editorial feedback from peers and instructors/supervisors through successive drafts.
T: Communicate effectively in modes appropriate to a discipline or area of inquiry.
U: Evaluate and critically assess sources and use the conventions of attribution and citation correctly.
V: Analyze and synthesize information and ideas from multiple sources to generate new insights.

Please note that this course partially meets the writing distribution requirement for the School of Arts and Sciences. In addition to developing your own writing skills through writing successive drafts, you will learn how to provide constructive feedback to other students’ writings.

COURSE PARTICIPATION GUIDELINES:

We will examine U.S. history from the perspective of the role and needs of working people. However, students are encouraged to freely express their views, including those that are critical of labor unions, as well as public policies, such as labor law reform, advocated by unions and their allies. Respect for and appreciation of different viewpoints will be a guiding principle in the class.

Since this an on-line course, students will not be discussing topics in class, but will be interacting with each other in discussion forums and peer review of writing assignments.

When participating in this on-line course it is an expectation that students will:

- Engage in regular and sustained interaction with peers in forum discussions.
- Communicate clearly, authentically, and maintain a content-oriented focus to encourage others to interact with you.
- Intellectually challenge peers to consider a topic by offering well developed comments that invite peers to share their reflections on course material.
- Maintain a positive and respectful attitude when interacting with peers.
