Textbook:

Required:

Monks, Robert A.G. and Nell Minow. Corporate Governance. Fifth Edition. New York: John Wiley & Sons, 2011. Paperback only. ISBN 978-0-470-97259-5. Available from the Bookstore or the publisher or at online booksellers. Note: The 5th edition is a complete revision of this text. Use only the 2011 new fifth edition. Earlier used copies of the textbook will not be suitable for this course. Note: Two copies of the textbook are on reserve at the Livingston Library.

Important research articles and working papers by major experts in corporate governance will be available. Each student will present a brief written and verbal presentation on one of these articles during the course to their class team.

Recommended:

The Wall Street Journal (for current corporate governance articles)

The New York Times (for current corporate governance articles)

Note: You will be also referred to pertinent articles on the web sites of the publications.

Course Description:

This is an introductory survey course that explores the relationship between corporate governance and the economic, social, and political impact of corporations. Topics include: history of the corporation and citizen and employee stock ownership, boards of directors, minorities and women on corporate boards, principal-agent/stakeholder theories, role of management and executive compensation, broad-based profit sharing, employee ownership, stock options, shareholder rights and activism, takeovers and mergers, labor issues and the role of pension funds, international corporate governance, the relationship between governance, corporate performance and financial collapses, the role of public stock markets, government oversight and the U.S. Securities and Exchange Commission (SEC), social and environmental sustainability and corporate social responsibility, and debates about public policy and government regulation of the corporation. Discusses implications for human resource management and labor and employment relations.

School of Management and Labor Relations (SMLR) Learning Objectives:

This course is designed to help students attain the following SMLR learning objectives:

- I) Written & Oral Communication – Communicate effectively at a level and in modes appropriate to an entry level professional
 - Communicate complex ideas effectively, in standard written English
 - Analyze and synthesize information and ideas from multiple sources to generate new insights
 - Produce high quality executive summaries
 - Make an argument using contemporary and/or historical evidence
 - Present ideas and arguments in a logical and effective way

- V) Understanding Context - Evaluate the context of workplace issues, public policies, and management decisions

- Analyze a contemporary global issue in their field from a multi-disciplinary perspective
- Analyze issues related to business strategies, organizational structures, and work systems
- Analyze issues of social justice related to work across local and global contexts (LSER)
- Analyze issues related to the selection, motivation, and development of talent in a global context (HRM)

Skills:

Students will become conversant with the major issues of the modern corporation and the major social science questions raised about the corporation in terms of governance and its role in society and the important research questions and sources of evidence on corporate behavior. Students will learn how to use the U.S. Securities and Exchange Commission web site in order to understand the principal information in Annual Reports and Corporate Proxy Statements filed before the SEC. Students will become familiar with several corporations, their stories and issues, along with the principal institutions in corporate governance in the United States: regulatory bodies, stock exchanges, associations of corporations, shareholder rights groups, corporate governance standards groups, corporate social responsibility institutions, and the principal research centers on corporate governance in the U.S. Students will develop a general understanding of the differences between the corporate governance systems of several nations and geographic areas worldwide (for example, Asia, Europe, and Africa). Students will hear brief reports from fellow students on many of the leading research articles on corporate governance. Students will be presented with a number of possible careers in management, labor relations, law, academia, public service, media, and non-profit research related to the field of corporate governance. Students do not require an understanding of economics or finance in order to take this course and any concepts from these disciplines necessary to understanding the material of the class will be explained clearly during the lectures.

Approach:

There will be a lecture at each class and then a discussion of a series of cases with some small group discussions and breakouts. Students will receive a copy of a powerpoint providing a general overview of the lecture on Sakai before the class so that you can use it as a basis for taking notes. Please print it out and bring it to class. Additional copies will also be available from the instructor. Each student should submit one question and one comment on one sheet of paper to the teaching assistants before each class. This is part of your participation grade. The entire class will be divided into affinity groups and teams made up of the 4 students sitting nearby. These groups will be used for smaller discussions, for team presentations, and to prepare questions for the instructor.

Required Work:

Students are required to turn in one question on a sheet of paper to the teaching assistants before every class in the morning. These questions should address issues that were unclear in the reading or any past questions from past classes that require clarification. These will be used as a basis for questions the instructor will address in the current and subsequent classes. Students will take three multiple choice exams with a few narrative questions. Each exam will also include an essay question on a corporate governance problem that requires creative thought. Students will prepare a brief one page (front and back) report on a research article to present to their affinity group/team. Students have the option (only if they wish it) to do an honors paper at the end of the class on a corporate governance question. If you select this option, you may select the grade for the honors paper or the grade for your final exam, whichever is the highest, as your third exam grade.

Attendance:

Participation in the lectures and class meetings is critical to the class both in terms of being present in class and fully participating. Attendance will be taken in class and those not participating will lose points on the participation score. Materials will be presented in class that are not covered in the book and they will make up a significant part of the examinations. All materials will be available on Sakai. A student missing more than 3 classes will not receive credit for this course. Each student will have one excused absence that will not count towards these three classes. This excused absence can be used for any reason and does not require a note so it can be used for an absence related to an illness, for example. There will be two extra points on top of the entire grade for perfect attendance, meaning the excused absence is also not used.

Examinations:

There will be three examinations as noted on the course schedule. Each exam will cover approximately one-third of the course material. Make-up policy: An examination grade of “0” will be assigned to any student who is absent without a legitimate excuse on the day of the regularly scheduled exam. Legitimate excuses include illness (verified only by a note from a doctor or area Dean), inclement weather (only when the Rutgers Information Service (732-932-INFO) indicates that Rutgers is closed or when the instructor emails the class announcing class is suspended) or other dire circumstances such as a family emergency. One make-up exam will be held when all students needing to take a make-up exam can be present. Students requiring special arrangements should present a statement to that effect with appropriate documentation as early in the semester as possible, but certainly prior to the first midterm examination.

Grading:

Grades will consist of the following components of 100% of the grade: Examination 1 – 24%; Examination 2 – 20%; Examination 3 – 25%; Participation - 26%

Points can be deducted for not being present in order to participate in the class and for egregious classroom conduct (as described below). One class absence reduces your participation score by 2.5 points. Each exam will receive a score of 0 to 100 points.

A = 91% and above.; B+ = 85%-90%; B = 80%-84%; C+ = 75%-79%; C = 70%-74%;

Please see the Academic Integrity Contract which must be signed and turned in at the first class. Bring a signed copy with you to the first class.

Academic Integrity Contract:

(To be signed and turned in at the first class to the Teaching Assistants)

All members of the Rutgers University community are expected to behave in an ethical and moral fashion, respecting the human dignity of all members of the community and resisting behavior that may cause danger or harm to others through violence, theft, or bigotry. All members of the Rutgers University community are expected to adhere to the civil and criminal laws of the local community, state, and nation, and to regulations promulgated by the University. All members of the Rutgers University community are expected to observe established standards of scholarship and academic freedom by respecting the intellectual property of others and by honoring the right of all students to pursue their education in an environment free from harassment and intimidation. Please see <http://policies.rutgers.edu/PDF/Section10/10.2.11-current.pdf> for details regarding the Student Code of Conduct. Please see http://academicintegrity.rutgers.edu/files/documents/AI_Policy_9_01_2011.pdf for details regarding the Academic Integrity Policy.

Similarly, all students and faculty members of the academic community at the School of Management and Labor Relations should uphold high standards for personal conduct, ethical behavior, and professional integrity. In the area of academic integrity, students are expected to refrain from cheating, fabricating information, plagiarizing, inappropriately denying others access to material, and facilitating others in academic dishonesty. Please see <http://policies.rutgers.edu/PDF/Section10/10.2.11-current.pdf> (pp. 24-28) for detailed descriptions of each type of action.

Any of the following acts, when committed by a student, is an act of academic dishonesty and decreases the genuine achievements of other students and scholars. Academic dishonesty includes, but is not limited to, any of the following:

Plagiarism/False Representation of Work

- Quoting directly or paraphrasing portions of someone else's work without acknowledging the source.
- Submitting the same work, or major portions thereof, including presentations, to satisfy the requirements of more than one course without permission from the instructor.
- Using data or interpretative material for a report or presentation without acknowledging the sources or the collaborators.
- Failing to acknowledge assistance from others, such as help with research, statistical analysis, or field data collection, in a paper, examination, or project report.
- Submitting purchased materials such as a term paper as your own work.
- Copying or presenting material verbatim from any source without using quotation marks.
- Copying from any source and altering a few words to avoid exact quotation, without the appropriate documentation or by using improper documentation of the source.
- Rewording the major concept found in a source but then omitting documentation or improperly citing the source.
- Submitting as one's own any work created by someone else (e.g., paper, project, speech, video, exercise, etc.) without crediting them. Large duplication of someone else's work should be avoided unless you obtain express permission from both the instructor and originator of the work.

- Fabricating or misrepresenting data or information

- Forging signatures

Cheating

- Copying work on examinations.

- Acting to facilitate copying during an exam.

- Sharing answers through technology or in written or verbal form when such interactions are prohibited

- Using prohibited materials, such as books, notes, phones, or calculators during an examination.

- Working with another student on an assignment when such collaboration is prohibited.

- Stealing or having in one's possession without permission any materials, or property belonging to or having been generated by faculty, staff, or another student for the course.

- Willfully offering to do another student's work so they may represent it as their own

- Assisting another student in cheating or plagiarizing

- Doing another student's work, excluding collaborative learning assignments or joint assignments approved by the instructor.

Engaging in any of the above behaviors can result in an F on the examination or project, an F in the course, denial of access to internships, suspension for one or more semesters, or permanent expulsion from the School of Management and Labor Relations at Rutgers University.

I, _____ understand the Policies on Academic Integrity and the Student Code of Conduct at Rutgers University and the School of Management and Labor Relations. Furthermore, I understand the consequences of unethical behavior.

We all share a responsibility in creating an ethical environment. I resolve to uphold and support high standards for ethics and integrity at Rutgers University. If I see, hear, or observe violations of ethics and integrity I will report them to my instructor, Department Chair, or Dean.
