COURSE DESCRIPTION: Reports of touchdowns, home runs, and overtime goals by professional sports heroes are often overshadowed by stories of strikes, lockouts, and mass resignations. Some of the highest paid employees in American society and their wealthy employers have created a system of labor relations that has failed, as often as it has worked, in serving as a mechanism to collectively establish wages and working conditions. This course will examine this high stakes, high profile adventure in labor-management relations, and assess the impact of professional sports on fans, the public interest, and the economy. Particular emphasis will be focused on negotiation techniques and strategy.

COURSE READINGS: Assigned readings will be available on-line, from class handouts and available on SAKAI.RUTGERS.EDU
TEXT BOOKS DO NOT HAVE TO BE PURCHASED.

ASSIGNED PAPER: Each student will be responsible for a paper at least five pages. The paper will be on a topic selected by the Professor.

COURSE PROJECTS: The class will be divided into groups. The number of students in each group will be between 5-12 (depending on student enrollment).

Groups will then be assigned to act as an NFL agent or NFL team and negotiate a player contract. Negotiation style and tactics will be graded, as well as a synopsis of the contract. The synopsis will include a presentation to the class which will simulate a presentation to either the player or the NFL owner, explaining the contract. It should include comparisons of similar players, drafts and factor in individual needs or weaknesses for justification of the contract. The groups will also be required to submit a written summation outlining positions, backup data, etc. Groups will be selected for negotiations in front of the class.
