Ensuring Rights and Remedies for Immigrant Workers Under the NLRA

Pablo A. Godoy, Deputy Assistant General Counsel pablo.godoyduarte@nlrb.gov

We're an independent federal agency that protects the rights of privatesector employees (and USPS employees) to join together to improve their working conditions. Employees in both unionized and non-unionized workplaces have these rights.

We protect employees' rights to:

- engage in group efforts to improve their wages and working conditions determine whether they want to be represented by a union engage in collective-bargaining

- refrain from any of these activities

Who we protect

The National Labor Relations Act covers employees of most private businesses in the United States, including:

Workers at small businesses

Workers at nonprofits

Workers in states with "Right-to-Work" laws

Coverage exceptions

Some groups are excluded from protections, including:

Agricultural workers

Independent contractors

Domestic workers

Right to Engage in Union Activity

Employees have the right form, join or assist labor organizations

Right to Engage in Protected Concerted Activity

Two or more employees act together to improve their working conditions
A single employee brings group complaints to an employer or tries to convince co-workers to act together as a group

Examples of Protected Concerted Activity

- Talking with one or more co-workers about wages and benefits or other working conditions.
- Participating in a concerted refusal to work (strike) in unsafe conditions.
- Circulating a petition asking for better hours.
- Joining with co-workers to talk directly to a labor organization, the boss, a government agency, or the media about problems in the workplace.
- Filing a wage and hour lawsuit with co-workers.

In response to union or protected concerted activity, an employer is prohibited from taking any of these actions:

Firing or demoting the employee

Reducing pay, hours, or benefits

Transferring the employee to another location

Contacting law enforcement, including ICE

Imposing new paperwork requirements to maintain employment

Making working conditions less desirable, e.g., altering work schedules, denying overtime, isolating the employee

Threatening to do any of these things

Workers Are Protected Under the NLRA Regardless of Immigration Status
