Course Overview

It is becoming increasingly clear that the only sustainable source of competitive advantage for a company is the quality, uniqueness and commitment of its human capital.

This course focuses on models, tools and techniques that enable an organization to acquire, deploy and retain talented employees that will enhance the competitive advantage of the company. Workforce flow involves the sourcing, recruitment, screening, selection, onboarding and deployment of new employees required for the ongoing success of the organization. Workforce planning, promotion and succession management will be addressed along with the laws and regulation governing the legal requirements governing of workforce decisions. Emphasis is placed on techniques and procedures; however, theoretical and empirical research will be covered in order to provide the student with an appreciation of the state-of-the-art in the field. Further, the linking of staffing activities to strategic organizational goals is an important theme.

Learning Goals

- To provide students with a broad overview of staffing practice and research, including recruiting, selection, and human resource management.
- To acquaint students with legal guidelines which govern the practice of staffing and related human resource decision-making, policy development, etc.
- To present material on the external, environmental conditions that affect the practice of staffing and overall human resource management.

Course Delivery Format

This course runs from June 1, 2021 through July 21, 2021. It is delivered entirely online through the Learning Management System, Canvas. There will be no Face-to-Face, in-person classroom sessions, except for an optional virtual "meet your professor and classmates" live Zoom session.

The course is delivered in asynchronous mode. This means the learning activities and communication takes place outside of real-time.
