Classes meet Thursdays at 3:50 pm in the Janice H. Levin building (Livingston campus), room 107.

General: In recent years, the field of alternative dispute resolution (“ADR”) has grown dramatically for resolving a wide range of conflicts, including those that arise in the workplace. As the presence of labor unions in the workplace has declined, many non-union employers have opted to provide their employees with a forum to resolve disputes that otherwise would go unresolved or would require lengthy and expensive litigation. As a result, grievance and other ADR procedures, long used in the unionized sector, have increased exponentially in the non-union sector. This course will explore the reasons for workplace conflict and compare the types of dispute resolution procedures that are used in both the union and non-union workplaces.

In this course we will examine dispute resolution in the non-union workplace as well as the processes used to resolve disputes in the union sector. Although the class is focused on processes that are used to resolve labor and employment disputes there will also be an emphasis on substantive laws and collective bargaining agreement provisions that often are the sources of conflict. Some background and knowledge of employment or labor law is useful but not required.

The class will also include a focus on communication and negotiating skills that are beneficial regardless of your major or career path. We spend nearly a third of our lives at work and experience a variety of workplaces, supervisors and co-workers who have different methods of addressing or avoiding conflict. Dispute resolution skills are also beneficial in our everyday lives where disagreements may range from selecting a place to go to dinner to serious interpersonal conflicts.

The Fine Print

Learning Objectives. The student is able to:
Labor Studies and Employment Relations Department:

- Apply concepts from employment relations, and substantive institutional knowledge, to understanding contemporary developments related to work. (Goal 2).

School of Management and Labor Relations:

- Demonstrate an understanding of how to apply knowledge necessary for effective work performance. (Goal VI)

Additional Course Objective(s) from the Instructor:

- Demonstrate an understanding of the reasons for workplace conflict, the types of dispute resolution procedures that are used in both the union and non-union workplaces and integrated conflict management systems.

Academic integrity

Academic integrity requires that all academic work be wholly the product of an identified individual or individuals. Joint efforts are legitimate only when the assistance of others is explicitly acknowledged and permitted by the assignment. Ethical conduct is the obligation of every member of the University community, and breaches of academic integrity constitute serious offenses. Any such issues will be submitted to the Dean of the Labor Studies and Employment Relations Department, as appropriate. Students must assume responsibility for maintaining honesty in all work submitted for credit and in any other work designated by the instructor of the course. Students are also expected to report incidents of academic dishonesty to the instructor or dean of the instructional unit. Students are expected to abide by the Rutgers University Code of Student Conduct. They are to conduct themselves with honesty and integrity.
