New Jersey Labor History (online)

Rutgers School of Management and Labor Relations
Spring 2021

Instructor: Dr. Daniel Sidorick

Email: daniel.sidorick@rutgers.edu

Important Points:

- ✓ This is an asynchronous online course, with all assignments and discussion taking place in Canvas; you can complete the work at your own convenience, as long as you meet the deadlines.
- ✓ There will be an assignment almost every week; late assignments will not be accepted more than one week after the due date.
- ✓ Normally, two visits to historical labor history locations in New Jersey are required. However, because of COVID, optional alternative assignments will be provided.
- ✓ You will need to log in to the course Canvas website several times a week, and respond promptly to any Canvas or email messages from the instructor.

Course Overview

History can sometimes seem remote. But in this course on New Jersey's workers and labor unions, the history of the state's workers will be as close as our backyards. We will learn how America's workers and their allies fought hard to win the rights and improvements we take for granted today, like minimum wage, weekends, and Social Security.

But we'll learn that by studying people and events in our own state, like the child workers in Paterson who went on strike in 1835 to win an 11-hour day, and the unemployed families of the "Army of Unoccupation" who took over the State House in Trenton in 1936 to press for relief during the Great Depression. We'll learn about surprising events like the battle of black and white workers at Seabrook Farms against vigilantes and the Ku Klux Klan (in 1934), and the war between striking workers in Elizabeth and mobsters from Murder, Inc. (in 1946).

We will also visit some of the sites where this history took place (though this semester we may do so virtually), walking the streets of Paterson where thousands of immigrant strikers marched in 1913, and standing on the balcony of Pietro and Maria Botto's house where Big Bill Haywood and Elizabeth Gurley Flynn rallied the strikers. The history of America's working class really is exciting, and there's no better way to find that out than by learning about the labor movement in New Jersey.

Among other topics, we will explore the history of trade unions and other worker movements in New Jersey from the first demands voiced by the Hibernia iron workers in the 1770s to the changing political role of the New Jersey AFL-CIO, the growth of public sector unions, and the challenges faced by working people and the union movement in New Jersey today.

We'll examine the craft unionism of the New Jersey Federation of Labor and its dominant building trades unions, the "one big union" philosophies of the Knights of Labor and the IWW, the revolutionary goals of Paterson's Italian anarchists and the Passaic textile strike's Communists, the industrial unionism of the CIO, the rise of public sector unionism, and new methods of organizing in the twenty-first century.

We place New Jersey worker movements in historic context with contemporaneous labor movements elsewhere in the United States and in other countries, and we examine the impact of political ideology, culture, ethnicity, race and gender issues on the development of New Jersey worker movements.

An important goal of the course is for students to learn to think logically and critically about ideas and events in history and to evaluate arguments from a variety of perspectives.

Statement on Disability: Rutgers University welcomes students with disabilities into all of the University's educational programs. In order to receive consideration for reasonable accommodations, a student with a disability must contact the appropriate disability services office at the campus where you are officially enrolled, participate in an intake interview, and provide documentation: <https://ods.rutgers.edu/students/documentation-guidelines>. If the documentation supports your request for reasonable accommodations, your campus's disability services office will provide you with a Letter of Accommodations. Please share this letter with your instructors and discuss the accommodations with them as early in your courses as possible. To begin this process, please complete the Registration form on the ODS web site at: <https://ods.rutgers.edu/students/registration-form>.

Statement on Academic Honesty: All work in this course must be your own. Be careful to always cite your sources. For direct quotes, include them within quotation marks and cite appropriately. Since none of us lived during the times we are studying, we must, of course, rely on the words and writings of others, but these must always be cited -- otherwise the use of those words is considered plagiarism. Any assignments containing the work of others and not cited properly will receive a grade of zero. Please contact me if you have any questions or concerns on this point.

Class Structure

The course is organized into 7 modules, each lasting 1 to 3 weeks and covering a chronological period and theme. There will be an assignment for almost every week ranging from 2-page reading responses to 3-page site visit reports, forum discussions, and a final 4-page paper. There will also be two quizzes. All late assignments will be downgraded one letter grade (e.g. A to B) and will not be accepted more than one week after due date.

This online course also requires you to visit two labor-history-related sites in New Jersey, but this semester virtual alternative site visits will be an option. The site visits are organized around the periods we will be studying: one for the earlier period (Modules 1-2), and one for the twentieth century (Modules 3-7).

Students are responsible for checking their Canvas inbox and the course website, including all announcements, frequently, and completing all readings, videos, and assignments on time.
