COURSE DESCRIPTION: Reports of touchdowns, home runs, anti overtime goals by professional sports heroes are often overshadowed by stories of strikes, lockouts, and mass resignations. Some of the highest paid employees in American society and their wealthy employers have created a system of labor relations that has failed, as often as it has worked, in serving as a mechanism to collectively establish wages and working conditions. This course will examine the history and evolution of labor-management relations in professional sports and assess the impact of professional sports on fans, the public interest, the economy and also how collegiate athletics is impacted by labor relations. Particular emphasis will be focused on the labor relations concerns of Athletic Representation and its impacts on sports.

Labor Studies and Employment Relations Department: Work productively in teams, in social networks, and on an individual basis (Goal 13).

School of Management and Labor Relations: Demonstrate an ability to interact with and influence others in a professional manner, and to effectively present ideas and recommendations (Goal VII).

Additional course objective(s) from the instructor: To Allow the student to learn and understand the workings of the employer/employee/union relationships in sports.

COURSE REQUIREMENT: 1) mid-term exam, 2) final exam, 3) class project, 4) attendance and class participation. Each requirement will count for 25% of a student's final grade.
