Description

The field of organizational behavior (OB) is about understanding how people and groups in organizations behave, react, and interpret events. It also describes the role of organizational systems, structures, and processes in shaping behavior, and explains how organizations really work. Drawing from fields including management, anthropology, sociology, information technology, ethics, economics, and psychology, OB provides a foundation for the effective management of people in organizations. Because it explains how organizations work from individual motivation to team dynamics to organizational structure, knowing about OB is essential to being effective at all organizational levels.

Because an organization's people are responsible for gaining and keeping a competitive advantage, understanding how to mobilize and motivate employees is critical to organizational performance. Businesses excel when employees understand how their behaviors influence an organization's performance and enable strategy execution, and when they are led effectively and are motivated to do their best. Competitors can often copy a firm's technologies, products, processes, and structures, but it is difficult to duplicate a core of talented, knowledgeable, motivated employees who work together to achieve the firm's goals and who care about their firm's success. Understanding and practicing OB concepts is critical to understanding organizations and gives individuals, managers, and organizations the skills and tools they need to be effective.

Organizational behavior is also the cornerstone of success for individuals in organizations. Even the most skilled nurse, salesperson, accountant, engineer, or anything else will be ineffective as an employee and as a manager without good OB skills, including interpersonal and communication skills and a solid understanding of managing and motivating individuals and teams.

- Use the course calendar to identify all assignment due dates and graded assignment return dates. The calendar is available as a link under course home along with the syllabus.
- Students are given ample time to participate in forums. Forum participation cannot be made up.
- The writing assignments will be accepted up to 24 hours late (12:01 am – 11:49 pm) for a 10% penalty.

Things happen!

When you don't have to attend a class session in person, it's easy to let a situation in your personal or professional life get in the way of online course work. In addition, remember the first rule in computer use – the computer or Internet connection will act up at the most critical time. Because "things happen" it's a best practice not to wait until the last minute to take the exam, submit a comment in a forum, or upload a writing assignment.

Contact the eCollege 24/7 toll-free helpdesk if you experience any technical problems that prohibit you from completing an assignment. Technical problems are not a valid excuse for missing a due date.

Plan ahead if you'll be unable to complete an assignment on time. You may need to submit the assignment earlier than the posted due date.

Recognize Best Practices and Use Them to Achieve Success

General Information on Directions and Assignment Grading:

- Students are offered specific directions on how to complete each assignment within the course shell as well as within the weekly messages. In addition, specific grading rubrics are published so that students understand exactly how each assignment will be graded. It is expected that students will be attentive to directions and the grading criteria for assignments. Paying attention is in the student’s best interest. An overview of best practices for the two most point bearing course assignments are provided below.

Best Practices in Forum Participation

- Six learning community forums are held throughout the semester.
- If a student chooses to participate in all six forums, the numbered forum with the lowest number of points earned will be dropped.
- Students are expected to engage in forum discussions multiple times during a Wednesday – Tuesday course week. Forums open on Wednesdays (12:01 am), first comment dates are on Saturdays (by 11:59 pm), and forums close on Tuesdays (11:59 pm).
- While forums are designed to be active and expressive, they are not chat rooms. A forum is an established area of the course where peers contribute to the greater understanding or appropriate expansion of course topics. Working together, students create an intriguing, supportive, and useful “community of learners” where peers choose to visit and participate. Earning the highest number of points in a forum requires following these best practices:

➤ Comment Quality

- are relevant to the topics addressed in a forum
- exhibit critical thinking and an overall understanding of topic is evident

➤ Participation

- The minimum number of posts: two posts, more than one topic.
 - 1. One of the posts must be your idea.
 - 2. The other should be your comment on other student’s post. Fosters learning community development through: one or more replies acknowledging and then building upon the ideas/thoughts of others. (no echoing)
- The first comment must be made before 11:59 pm Saturday (4 days after forum opens). If you did not post your first comment before Saturday midnight, 40% would be deducted.
- You must post your comments in at least two different days. If you posted all of your comments in one day, even it’s before the first deadline, 30% would be deducted.

➤ Context and Expression

- Comments are presented using appropriate grammar, sentence structure, and spelling.
- Comments are well communicated. It is easy for peers to understand points being made.
- Expression of ideas/thoughts is outstanding. Comments are appropriate for an academic forum.

Best Practices in Completing Writing Assignments

- There are three sets of criteria on which students are graded. Earning the highest number of points within each section of the writing assignments requires following these best practices:

➤ Content

- Content that relates to required/recommended course material is accurate.
- Questions are thoroughly answered, and content is appropriate for the topic of inquiry.
- Content that indicates knowledge gained and potential for knowledge/skills to influence future thoughts/behavior is adequately linked to course materials (including any material brought into the course by a student). When required, citations are provided.
- You need to cite at least two directly relevant and reputable sources (other than the textbook and videos).
 - Use a standard reference format. Do not simply copy and paste website addresses (although those should be included if appropriate).
 - Examples:
 - Reagan, B. (2011, October 24). Perks with a payoff. Wall Street Journal, B1.
 - Beauregard, T. A., & Henry, L. C. (2009). Making the link between work-life balance practices and organizational performance. Human Resource Management Review, 19(1), 9-22
 - For sources, consult business media (Wall Street Journal), academic journals (Academy of Management Journal, Personnel Psychology, etc.), and practitioner journals (HRMagazine). Your sources should be articles from academic, peer-reviewed journals. (If you are not sure what keywords or combination of keywords to use, ask; Google Scholar will be helpful.)

➤ Reflection

- Answers indicate a high level of reflection and insight on the topic.
- Critical thinking is evident.
- A strong desire to reflect on topics is evident.

➤ Organization & Mechanics

- Writing is fluent and lively.
- All answers are presented in a professional manner: using appropriate grammar, sentence structure, and spelling.
- You must follow the MLA formatting. (For more information please click on “MLA Formatting”, under course home)
- All ideas/thoughts are well communicated. Answers to all questions are concise/to the point.
- Engages in a high-quality Internet search (when applicable).
- Instructions for completing assignment are followed.
