Course Description

This course is an introduction to American social and labor history, focusing on the role of working people in the making of the modern United States. Situating North American developments within a global context, the course will open with the discussion of European colonial expansion in the early modern period and conclude with the demise of Reconstruction in 1877. Topics will include native-colonial relations during European settlement; imperial conquest and competition in the Atlantic world; the rise of slave-based economies and patterns of slave resistance; the advent of wage labor and the establishment of capitalist social relations in the early nineteenth century; the impact of mass immigration on American society and class relations; and the general dynamics of race, class, and gender in the context of labor and work. Particular emphasis will be given to the political, social, and ideological ramifications of the American War for Independence (1775-1783) and the American Civil War (1861-1865).

Required Course Materials

The only material required for this course is a textbook—Christopher Clark et al, Who Built America? Working People and the Nation's History, Volume 1: To 1877 (Boston: Bedford/St. Martin's, 2008), Third Edition. Please make sure to acquire the Third Edition. This title will be available for purchase from the Rutgers bookstore at Barnes and Noble; it can also be purchased from various online book vendors, including Amazon.com. An e-book version is also available. Please note that only VOLUME 1 is required for this course.

Additional primary-source readings will be uploaded to the course website. Students will be notified via Sakai when additional readings have been posted.

Assessments

Student assessment will be based on two examinations (a midterm accounting for 20% of the final grade, and a final exam accounting for 25%), two papers (the first paper will be worth 20% of the final grade, the second paper 25%), and class participation (10%).

The exams will consist of short identifications and essays, drawing on material from the lectures and assigned readings.

Because this course meets the writing requirement for SAS, students will be required to submit drafts of their papers, engage in peer-review sessions with their fellow students, and revise their drafts accordingly.

Over the course of the semester we will have several unannounced quizzes, which will ask students to summarize or interpret material from that day's assigned reading. These quizzes will be factored into students' participation grade.

Attendance

Attendance is required at all class meetings. More than 4 unexcused absences will negatively affect a student's overall participation grade. More than 12 unexcused absences will result in a failing grade for the course. Students with a perfect attendance record—that is, zero unexcused absences— will receive a 3-point grade increase on their final exam. (A final exam grade of 90, for example, would be marked up to a 93.)

Electronics Policy

Students may bring laptop computers to class for the purpose of taking notes. The use of cell phones, except in the case of emergencies, is not permitted during class.

Academic Integrity

Students should present their work honestly and acknowledge when they borrow the language and ideas of others. To help avoid issues of plagiarism and academic dishonesty, students should familiarize themselves with the Rutgers's academic integrity guidelines (<http://wp.rutgers.edu/courses/plagiarism>).

Students with Disabilities

Students in need of modified accommodation for exams and/or course assignments should contact the Office of Disabilities Services (<https://ods.rutgers.edu>).
