Labor Studies and Employment Relations Department Goals:

This course will examine the evolving position of black workers in the U.S. economy and demonstrate understanding of the perspectives, theories and concepts in the field of labor and employment relations. We will evaluate the context of workplace issues, public policies and management decisions. Demonstrate how to apply concepts and substantive institutional knowledge of contemporary work developments and relevant theories of particular work situations necessary for effective work performance.

Course Learning Objectives:

Goal A: Analyze the degree to which forms of human difference shape a person's experiences of and perspectives on the world.

Goal B: Analyze a contemporary global issue from a multidisciplinary perspective.

Goal D: Analyze issues of social justice across local and global contexts.

Goal I: Understand the bases and development of human and societal endeavors across time and place.

Goal M: Understand different theories about human culture, social identity, economic entities, political systems and other forms of social organization.

Goal N: Apply concepts about human and social behavior to particular questions or situations.

Grading Criteria:

Credit also extended for attendance and in-class contributions (group discussions). Please note that excessive unexcused absences will lower your grade. Unexcused absences in excess of 3 classes may result in a failing grade.
